Starter for Ten: Conversations about Place

Petra Biberbach
Chief Executive

"Town planning ... if it is to be successful ... must be folk planning."
Patrick Geddes

By applying Geddes's ideas and approaches to modern civic engagement, PAS puts folk back into place.

What is the Place Standard?

... for us, it is a good excuse to start a genuine conversation.

What we've learned about the Place Standard

It's a flexible and engaging process. It shifts the emphasis from consultation to conversation. It encourages professionals to talk with people in plain language. It enables people to talk about what's important to them.

It starts the conversation but does not limit where it goes.

The Place Standard: an inclusive approach

Worked for reaching out and starting conversations with traditionally people and groups.

Helping conversations about place with Gypsy/Travellers, young orphans, young people experiencing homelessness and more.

Enabling modern opportunities to participate in decisions about their place.
