Chief Executive's foreword

The year ahead will be an extraordinary year for NHS Health Scotland. It will be a year of change, but this plan is fundamentally about what NHS Health Scotland will deliver in 2018/19 and how we will continue to work towards our vision of a fairer, healthier Scotland.

The coming year will be the final year in which we operate as the organisation we have been since 2003. From April 2019 fairer health improvement will be part of the remit of a new public health body for Scotland; a body that will bring together all domains of public health in order to make a real difference to the health of the people of Scotland. This is an exciting change that we welcome at NHS Health Scotland, as indeed we warmly welcome the collaborative approach being taken by the Scottish Government in developing the new body.

The move to the new public health body is a significant change, but it is not the only exciting change ahead. 2018/19 will also see the development of closer collaboration and a 'Once for Scotland' approach between health boards in Scotland and the sharing of a number of corporate services between boards. Efficient and effective use of skills, experience and resources is crucial for the health service to serve the people of Scotland in the best way it can. Ultimately, both programmes of change are about making a real difference to the health of people in Scotland.

The year ahead will therefore be one of change and transition. We have ensured that we have the capacity to effectively contribute to, and manage the impact of, both programmes of change. But this will not be to the detriment of the important work we do on fairer health improvement. We set out our priorities in working towards a fairer, healthier Scotland last year in our Strategic Framework for Action 2017–2022. This Delivery Plan sets out the specific pieces of work we will be focusing on in 2018/19 and paves the way, along with the Strategic Framework for Action, for the work on fairer health improvement that will be taken up next year by the new public health body.

Our work is set firmly within the Scottish Government's priorities for NHS Boards described in the Health and Social Care Delivery Plan published in December 2016, particularly the ambition to increase healthy life expectancy for all. Our delivery commitments reflect the emerging new national public health priorities for Scotland, developed by the Scottish Government together with the public health community, the third sector, the Convention of Scottish Local Authority (COSLA) and the Society of Local Authorities Chief Executives (SOLACE).

Our plan has also been developed alongside our collaborative work with the other seven special NHS boards to create a National Boards Delivery Plan. We will submit under separate cover to Scottish Government a Local Delivery Plan which highlights the particular contributions we will make to that National Plan.

I know I speak for all of my colleagues when I say that we are as committed as ever to achieving our vision of a Scotland in which all people and communities have a fairer share of the opportunities, resources and confidence to live longer, healthier lives.

Gerry McLaughlin,
Chief Executive
NHS Health Scotland

Introduction

Delivering better health for everyone in Scotland

NHS Health Scotland is a national Health Board working with public, private and third sector organisations to reduce health inequalities and improve health. Our primary role is to work with others to produce and share the knowledge of what works, and doesn't work, to reduce health inequalities, and to improve how that knowledge is turned into action.

This Delivery Plan sets out NHS Health Scotland's delivery commitments for 2018/19. Our focus as a Health Board is on the national target of increased healthy life expectancy and we focus our resources on people and groups who experience the worst health outcomes as a result of the social determinants of health.

Our commitments are aligned with the five strategic priorities set out in our Strategic Framework for Action 2017–2022, which are:

1. Fairer and healthier policy
We will ensure our knowledge and evidence is used by policy and decision makers. This is so that strategies focus on fairness and influence the social determinants of health and wellbeing.

2. Children, young people and families
We will ensure the knowledge and evidence we provide is used to implement strategies focused on improving the health and wellbeing of children, young people and families.
3. A Fair and inclusive economy
We will provide knowledge and evidence on socio-economic factors and their impact on health inequalities. This is to contribute to more informed and evidence-based social and economic policy reform.
4. Healthy and sustainable places
We will ensure the knowledge and evidence we provide is used to improve the quality and sustainability of places. This will increase their positive effect on health and wellbeing.
5. Transforming public services
We will work in partnership with and support public sector organisations to design and deliver services that have fairer health improvement and the protection of human rights at their core.

Our strategic priorities are supported by three strategic change priorities, which say how we will:

- improve how we work in order to deliver our strategic priorities
- secure the place of fairer health improvement in the new public health landscape
- prepare for transition to the new public health body.

Development of this plan

This Delivery Plan was developed drawing from a number of sources including:

- analysis of the Scottish Government's Programme for Government and how our work aligns with this
- engagement with and feedback from our customers, partners, stakeholders and staff
- evidence reviews of what will work to improve health and reduce health inequalities
- the feedback we received from government on our 2017 Annual Review
- the Health and Social Care Delivery Plan, announced in December 2016, which sets out the government's triple aim of 'better care, better health and better value' and includes the national target of increased healthy life expectancy
- Local Delivery Plan (LDP) guidance for 2018/19 and the development of a collaborative National Boards Delivery Plan for 2018/19

Feedback from our 2017 Annual Review has been incorporated into this Delivery Plan. This includes the following recognition from the Minister of Public Health and Sport:

- New public health body - We are in a period of major organisational change as the shape and form of the new national public health body is developed. It is important that we deliver on our priorities while allowing for sufficient flexibility within our resources to support work on the new body.

- Five Year Strategic Framework – Our new strategy will allow for continuity and stability of our current activities until the new body is ready to take responsibility and will also help inform the Government's thinking around the new body.
- Leadership – We continue to have an important leadership role in public health and particularly in reducing health inequalities and that this includes supporting Local Authorities, Health Boards and Integrated Joint Boards in to take practical action to improve public health.
- Place Standard - Our collaborative work on the Place Standard is an example of the exceptional quality of the work we undertake with others.
- Health in all policies - It is important that we continue our work to extend health in all policies, working across a range of public policy areas to positively impact on health and wellbeing.
- Workforce – We must work to sustain our values and the culture of NHS Health Scotland through the period of change and transition. We should invest time in our legacy and carefully consider what we should carry forward to the new body and what we should not bring forward

A number of other corporate documents and plans support this Delivery Plan, including our financial plan and workforce planning assumptions. These documents can be found in the 'Our Organisation' section of our website.

Our delivery commitments for 2018/19

Our Strategic Framework for Action 2017–2022 describes the five priority areas that will contribute to the realisation of a fairer, healthier Scotland and the long-term outcomes that we believe can be achieved in each of these areas over a five-year period. This Delivery Plan describes the practical actions we will take towards these outcomes in 2018/19. These actions are set out as delivery commitments, grouped under short-term outcomes in each of the five priority areas.

This plan also includes the actions we will take in 2018/19 to support the organisation to respond to the emerging public health landscape, including the transition to the new public health body. These actions are set out as delivery commitments grouped under short-term outcomes in our three strategic change priority areas.

We also deliver a number of national, professional and corporate services in overall support of our and our partners' work. These services are set out as core delivery commitments.

Each delivery commitment is accompanied by a set of performance indicators, each of which states when we expect to have achieved it (Q1, June 2018; Q2, September 2018; Q3, December 2018; Q4, March 2019). We use these performance indicators to monitor our progress and we report on our progress quarterly.

Strategic priority 1 Fairer and healthier policy

Short-term outcome: We have influenced policy areas where the impact on reducing health inequalities and population health improvement is likely to be greatest

Core delivery commitments

This section accounts for some of the national services provided by NHS Health Scotland and the core professional and corporate services which enable the organisation to deliver our strategic aims. The majority of our work is based on knowledge and information. We take great pride in our research and evidence expertise, and the specialist marketing, publishing, digital and communications functions that enable many of our stakeholders to access high-quality services and knowledge-based products.

Core services also include the resources and functions required to fulfil the organisation's governance obligations, and the national workforce planning and financial planning guidelines laid out in the LDP guidance for 2018/19.

Our workforce

Our workforce is by far our single biggest resource. The financial and policy workforce planning assumptions that we have made about our workforce and staff budget for 2018/19 are included within the financial plan, which is summarised in Appendix 1. We have also taken into account the Scottish Government's Everyone Matters: 2020 Workforce Vision Implementation Plan for 2018/20 in developing our workforce delivery commitments for 2018/19. Everyone Matters specifies five priority areas and specific actions that we are expected to take in 2018/19. These priority actions are set out below along with (in brackets) the delivery commitment in which relevant actions are planned:

- Healthy organisational culture: Ensure that iMatter is embedded as a continuous improvement tool to improve staff experience and that actions are taken to respond to feedback, particularly improving leadership visibility and staff engagement (workforce engagement).

- Sustainable workforce: Take action to promote the health, wellbeing and resilience of the workforce (workforce engagement).
- Capable workforce: Work across organisational and professional boundaries (i.e. between primary and secondary care, between sectors and so on) to share good practice in learning and development, evidence-informed practice and organisational development (workforce engagement).
- Effective leadership and management: Deliver actions within the overview paper "Executive Level Leadership and Talent Management in the NHS in Scotland" published May 2017 (workforce engagement, and a common set of best practice behaviours is valued and practised across the organisation)

The 2020 Workforce Vision priority for which we do not have planned actions relates to 'workforce to deliver integrated services', as this is very specifically about the workforce in local Health Board areas. We do, however, have a number of strategic delivery commitments about our national role in supporting the capacity of the health and social care workforce. Our actions to meet our obligations under our Property Assets Management Strategy (PAMS) are also built into this plan, under the core delivery commitment 'workforce engagement'. The table on page 42 shows our core delivery commitments and the performance indicators we will use to measure our performance, including when we expect to meet these targets (Q1–Q4).

Core delivery commitments
